1. December 1953 exports to the USSR, there were no Masse shipments from the Teichwolframsdorf railroad station in the district of Gera or from the Kirchberg railroad station in Saxony. It appears improbable that Masse could be shipped from the Kirchberg railroad station because it is a narrow-gauge station. Shipments would be possible only by reloading the Masse on normal gauge freight cars or by using Rollenfahrzeuge (undercarriages designed for the transportation of railroad cars).
2. There is no indication from the numbers of the bills of lading whether the shipping documents for Masse shipments were complete. Masse and other export goods were dispatched from the same freight dispatching offices, therefore the bills of lading numbers for uranium shipments are not necessarily consecutive.
